

LINKS TO UPU CONVENTIONS AND RELATED DOCUMENTS AVAILABLE FREE ON THE INTERNET.

By John Copeland

Edition 14.2.2026

The links shown are either to the start of the book or other item containing the document or to the location which contains the start of the document itself.

More than one link may be shown, (although once one link has been found, others have not been deliberately looked for) as defects in one copy may not appear in another, the language(s) used may differ and, even if the same copy of an item has been used to provide scans for different providers, the formats available or results of searches may differ.

Experience of using internet links shows that these can easily disappear. Most of those listed however are from organisations who are unlikely to cease to exist, although there is always a risk of a change in storage arrangements resulting in the substitution or deletion of links (e.g. with the Foreign Office in 2018) or a change of policy regarding provision of documents.

The form in which documents can be viewed varies, with some providers only providing one option and others a choice. Where a text option is supplied, this is usually produced by optical character recognition (OCR) and the quality of the copy produced can be poor.

If a website has a search facility this usually utilises OCR, so a negative result does not automatically mean that the term searched does not appear in the item.

How easily a document can be read may depend on the browser used. For instance, in July 2017 the Bodleian Library's pdf's were most easily read using Chrome rather than Firefox or Edge.

It is assumed that the works are out of copyright or the providers have obtained any necessary licence, although no guarantee is given and any comments by the provider may well be subject to copyright. Some providers purport to grant a licence regarding use of the original documents but, if the documents are out of copyright, this may be irrelevant.

Many texts are available via the Internet Archive, Hathi Trust, Google Books or BNF Gallica. Books from websites may not be available to read in the United Kingdom but may be available elsewhere, particularly the United States, because of copyright reasons. The list is confined to those available in the United Kingdom.

For treaties from 1920 members of the League of Nations, and subsequently the United Nations, were supposed to register treaties involving them with the relevant body, who were supposed to publish them. It appears however that the League never got round to publishing the Conventions and other agreements arrived at in Madrid in 1920 and were not supplied with the supplemental agreements reached at Buenos Aires in 1939, while the convention and agreements agreed at Paris in 1947 were not published by the United Nations. The United Nations have arranged for various volumes to be accessible on the Internet and the World Legal Information Institute (WorldLII) also provides access to the English texts.

Some of the links are to treaty collections including volumes in the British and Foreign State Papers, "Hertslet's Commercial Treaties: A Collection of Treaties and Conventions, Between Great Britain and Foreign Powers, and..." ("Hertslet") and those published for treaties involving Austria, Belgium, France, Italy, Netherlands, Sweden, and the United States.

The basic document for the UPU up to 1964 was the Convention which was supplemented by protocols and detailed regulations. There were additional supplemental agreements which did not involve all UPU members [the USA in particular did not join them]. At the Conference at Vienna the structure of the documents was changed so there was a Constitution with General Regulations covering the organisational aspects, the Convention for the technical aspects while the supplemental agreements continued.

Initially the language used for the original documents was French, so the English versions were translations which did not have the same legal standing and of which more than one version might be available.

If you find a link does not work or spot an error, please email internetlinkslists@btinternet.com with details.

Examples of the titles of the supplemental agreements in French with English equivalents follow although variations in the title names did occur.
